Excerpt: .I to decide on attaching you to my person, I should previously expect that you would frankly inform me what were the measures, and who were the men that you employed in those days to obtain your information, I do not allude to my stay at Verona or at Mittau, I was then surrounded by numerous adherents; but at Hartwell for instance, were you then well acquainted with what passed under my roof? Yes, Sire, every day the motions of your Majesty were made known to me. Eh, what! surrounded as I was by intimate friends, who could have betrayed me? What wretch could thus have abused my confidence, I insist on your naming him immediately. Sire, you urge me to say that which must wound your Majesty's heart very deeply. Speak sir, Kings are but too subject to be deceived in their fondest hopes. You command it, Sire; well then I must own that I was in correspondence with the Duc d Aumont. I What! that wretched De Pienne, who possessed my entire confidence, said the King with visible emotion, and at the same time continuing with a malicious smile: to be sure, I must say he was very poor, and he had many expenses to defray, and living is very dear in England; well then, M. Fouche, it was I, sir, who dictated to him those letters which you received every week, and I gave up to him the 12000f. out...
