Excerpt: . . . by a rapid succession of crops, and leave it and break down more. I have passed through tracts of country that looked more like the destruction of an army than inhabitants settling for life, much less providing a settlement for future generations, and as the settlement of our country now goes on, one or two hundred years will have swept the whole, and the tide will set from west to east. Should you think best to settle in business at the west, I shall do nothing to discourage you, and very likely it may be the best plan you can select. You have doubtless learned by this time, that the country does not make the man, but man gives character to the country; that energy and perseverance are necessary in every plan. I have one son only. I hope he will, if he lives to engage in business, begin with no more than he can comprehend and manage prudently. With such a course, means will generally increase as fast as the capacity does, and such a course I should advise to all my friends. NOTES. FAMILY NUMBER TWO. John Dickinson and his family removed from Wethersfield to Hadley with his father, 1659. He is said to have married at about seventeen, and to have had six children before he was twenty-seven. He was a Sergeant, and was killed at the Falls (Turners) fight, King Philips War, May 19, 1676. His eldest daughter, Hannah, married...
